World War 2 – 1943

John Thompson Strategic analyst - quotes from his book "Spirit Over Steel"

Dec 26th: Scharnhorst is sunk in a gun duel with HMS Duke of York and its escorts. Only 36 of her 2,000 crew survive. For the price of a USN destroyer, 1st Marine Division lands in three sites on New Britain near Cape Gloucester. Monte Sammucro and its surrounding features are finally cleared of the Germans.

Dec 27th: The US expands their beach-heads in Cape Gloucester, encountering far more problems from the weather and terrain than the Japanese. The Soviets send 98,139 Kalmyks to Central Asia – the splendid American lend-lease trucks meant for the Red Army are a considerable help in these deportations.

Dec 28th: The remaining Fallschirmjager pull out of Ortona, what is left of the ancient Italian town is liberated by the Canadians. Another bad day for the Kriegsmarine, in the Bay of Biscay a blockade runner and three other warships are sunk by rampaging British surface warships. Vatutin's troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front are nearing Zhitomir once more. Famed for her feats of flying and aerial navigation in the 1930s, Marina Raskova became a Hero of the Soviet Union in 1938. With the arrival of the war, she used such influence as she had to bring about the creation of three all-woman aviation regiments for wartime service, and accepted command of a bomber regiment (eventually to become the 125 Guards Bomber Aviation Regiment) flying Pe2 attack aircraft. Today, she dies in a forced landing in her Pe2.

Dec 31st: A good day for the Soviets, they conclude a winning year as Zhitomir is retaken and Vitebsk is surrounded. In contrast to their situation two years earlier, the Soviets can outmass the Germans anywhere they care to mount an offensive and the qualitative gap of 1941 is getting much narrower. Hereafter, the main impediment on the rate of the Soviet advance will be logistics.

Essential Reading: Stalin retains a horrid fascination and it is seldom remembered that he is responsible for more deaths than Hitler ever managed (one hopes there is some special place in the hereafter).

1944: The Allies at Full Strength.

The crushing weight of Allied industrial superiority becomes more evident with every passing month, but the Axis militaries adapt. The Japanese are slowly learning that open engagements with Allied troops result in a heavy imbalance of casualties and so encase themselves in rock and concrete where possible. At the same time, their airmen are coming to realize that the best use of their increasingly obsolescent aircraft and poorly-trained replacement pilots is to turn their aircraft into manned missiles. The Germans apply the same genius they used for offensive warfare earlier to their defensive tactics and extract the highest price they can. However, their strength on much of the Eastern Front is stretched too thin, too often, notwithstanding Hitler's frequent 'stand-fast' orders.

Faced with this imbalance, the Japanese and the Germans place an increasing premium on ideological and spiritual notions. They insist that the enemy's great material strength is necessary because they are weak, inferior and corrupt in comparison to the matchless warriors of Japan or the champions of National Socialism. The other slim hope is that they can put up such a ferocious defence that the ring enclosing them will not cinch tight. In the meantime, the insistence that willpower and heroic resolve will match Allied material advantages also extends to the home front where their people are being asked to do more with less every month.

Demanding sacrifice is even easier of slave labour. The Japanese use of POWs and conscripted Asian labourers is setting a killing pace of work on starvation rations. The Germans are combing occupied Europe for forced labour with their railroads straining at the seams although the mass murder of the continent's Jews remains the highest priority. Despite the thousands of tanks and aircraft and hundreds of ships, despite the vast river of munitions, rations and fuel flowing unceasingly towards the front; the Allied combatants make no pretence to be supermen in the service of some great new cause.

At the very front of this mighty effort are young men who have become very aware "of their mortality. They know what a well-sited machine gun or well-concealed landmine can do to their flesh; and the brutal damage a flurry of red hot razor sharp shell fragments can inflict on the fragile human frame. They have smelled what happens to tank crews when the fuel and ammunition ignites. Their radios have conveyed the voices of wingmen who can't bail out of burning planes. Yet somebody has to be the first to step into the too-quiet meadow, the first to rush across the defended street and the first to drive their tank over the crest of the hill or out of the tree-line. Somebody has to push the nose down and dive towards the hostile earth as the tracers arch up to meet them. They also know that their way home lies through Rome, Berlin, and Tokyo and so they come on.

January 1944: Anzio – where Wildcats Become Stranded Whales.

General: What a difference a year makes: Over the next three months, U-boats will only sink 54 Allied ships, while losing 60 submarines. Allied strategic bombers from the UK will drop 40,000 tons of bombs on Germany in January alone while tactical bombers work over the Pas de Calais region. Bombers in the Mediterranean will drop 11,000 tons in Italy this month.

Jan 1st: Admiral Sherman's carrier group (Task Force 50.2) hits a Japanese convoy off New Ireland.

Chancelière d'armes

Letters Patent

Earlier this week, RUSI President Cam Cathart introduced the members to the new, long-awaited, Royal United Services Institute Vancouver Society badge recently approved by the Chief Herald of Canada.

The new design, shown above, is based on the previous RUSI emblem. It shows crossed swords representing the Army, the wings the RCAF, the anchor the RCN, the red background emblematic of the RCMP and the mural crown, emblematic of civic authority, representing Emergency Services personnel. Royal designation was given the Institute by Her Majesty the Queen in 1989.

The Latin phrase meaning “Work for peace, prepare for war” conveys RUSI’s mandate for research, education and advocacy on defence issues. The design concept originated with Christopher Mackie, a local Heraldry consultant and Bruce Patterson, the Deputy Chief Herald of Canada. The new badge will be available, along with a new lapel pin, early in the new year. Members will be advised on the cost and availability of the badge when supplies are received from the manufacturer.
